Renowned Business, Financial Leader To Bring Expertise To Natawa Corporation

Terry Ashwill, Formerly of Perot Systems, To Serve as Economic Advisor to Natawa's Board of Directors

CAREFREE, Arizona (November 27, 2006) — Natawa Corporation has added a renowned financial and business expert to its team to help take advantage of growth opportunities and guide the rapidly expanding company into the future.

Terry Ashwill, a veteran of the financial industry who has worked with some of the biggest names in Big Business, has agreed to join Natawa Corporation as an advisor to the Board of Directors. Ashwill may take on further roles and responsibilities in the company in the future as well.

Ashwill is perhaps best known for serving as Chief Administrative Officer and CFO for Ross Perot's Perot Systems Corporation, playing an instrumental role in taking the company public. He has also served as a CFO for two multi-billion dollar organizations — True North Communications and Carlson Companies — during his stellar business career.

Natawa's Board of Directors will vote on the move at its next Board meeting in Phoenix on December 8. It is expected to pass unanimously; then Shareholders will get a chance to approve the move.

Ashwill's career began as a financial analyst for Ford Motor Company. He later served in several significant capacities for the Ryder rental vehicle group, including as Senior Vice President and Corporate Controller.

Ashwill said the company's unique business model and potential to become a significant player in the utility and development industries were what attracted him to Natawa Corporation.

“Natawa is a company with all the potential in the world to become extremely successful,” he said. “Their ability to provide unique financing and utility solutions for new development is something that will become more and more invaluable to developers and landowners in growing parts of North America. I’m extremely optimistic about their future and am pleased to be a part of their long-term planning.”

Dave Smoot, Natawa’s Founder and CEO, said the company is thrilled to bring on someone with the kind of extensive business expertise and background that Ashwill brings to the table.

“Terry Ashwill is a well-known and highly respected member of the business community who has been a part of many successful ventures,” Smoot said. “We’re pleased that he has recognized the current business success and the promise Natawa’s business model holds and wants to be a part of the company’s strategic planning process well into the future.”

About Natawa Corporation

Natawa is based in Carefree, Arizona, and provides developments with innovative solutions to their wastewater needs as well as fiber-optic cable installed to individual homes (fiber to the premises). Fewer than 1 million homes nationwide are wired with fiber optic cable all the way to the home, something that will become increasingly important as our reliance on technology and high-definition television continues. Natawa’s water and wastewater technology is cutting edge as well, including systems that are among the most efficient being constructed to save precious water resources in drier regions of the country.

The Natawa business model is unique because it does not require the developers and landowners it works with to come up with up-front costs for wastewater and cable infrastructure. And, Natawa shares a portion of the profits from its operations with the developers and landowners it works with.
